Stacey Klein is a business transaction and litigation attorney. Her deep understanding of contracts and her ability to foresee and address issues before they arise allow her to strategically negotiate for her clients and avoid litigation disputes.

Stacey's transactional experience includes helping clients with acquisitions, entity formation and corporate governance, trust administration, contract negotiations, and employment, settlement, and nondisclosure agreements. Prior to joining Gipson Hoffman & Pancione, Stacey was an in-house transactions attorney at a national credit card processing company and was responsible for a wide variety of corporate, business, and legal needs.

Stacey's courtroom experience includes litigating diverse contract and promissory note disputes involving licensing deals, copyright infringements, and secured loans.

In her free time, Stacey can be found traveling (she has been to six of the seven continents) or volunteering with the American Jewish Joint Distribution Committee.
