Won M. Park is a member of Gipson Hoffman & Pancione's Business Transactions and Litigation practice areas, with strong experience in professional liability litigation.

For more than two decades, Won has represented a range of clients from large institutions to individuals. He counsels and represents clients in a wide variety of matters and disputes, focusing on labor and employment issues, commercial and business disputes, professional liability claims, and insurance and bad faith litigation, from inception through appeal.

Won's practice includes counseling and representing employers in wage and hour claims, risk management, National Labor Relations Board charges, California Public Employment Relations Board charges, labor arbitrations, sexual harassment and discrimination claims, and Department of Industrial Relations cases.

Won has also successfully represented real property owners in breach of contract matters, which resulted in a defense verdict at trial; a national mortgage lender; and website and mobile app developers.

Won's professional liability practice focuses on representing attorneys, real estate brokers, escrow officers, and insurance brokers. His legal malpractice cases have arisen out of disputes over partnership, business, and real property matters, as well as marital dissolutions, health care, international law, and trusts and estates. He has successfully handled State Bar disciplinary hearings, federal contempt hearings, fee disputes, and audits.

Won regularly speaks and presents to clients and professionals in his areas of expertise, including risk management and legal ethics issues.

He is actively involved in charitable organizations and is an avid sports fan. He is also an amateur vintner who produces his own wine, Cabernet Sauvignon.
