Overview

Daniel is an attorney in our Tax and Estate & Wealth Planning practice groups. He specializes in tax, estate, and succession planning for businesses, individuals, and high-net-worth non-profit organizations, also working on transactional tax matters related to mid-market mergers and acquisitions. He handles all taxation issues pertaining to business operation across diverse industries, especially in real estate, and typically represents small to mid-sized businesses and business owners.

The focus of Daniel's work centers around determining the best way to form a transaction, gain tax efficiencies, and maintain protections for his client. He drafts corporate and operating agreements and is a trusted partner, offering advice and strategic planning in choice of entity decisions, tax structure, governance, documentation, and tax advice. Daniel understands how deals work and his clients trust his extensive knowledge of the extensive rules in this area for practical advice. A graduate of NYU's Executive LL.M. in Tax program, Daniel helps his clients think about things in different ways in order to come to unique and creative solutions. It is important to him that his clients understand what they are doing together and why. He alleviates their stress and concern by taking care of the technical aspects so they can concentrate on other aspects of their business.
